This program focuses on the concept of community-oriented policing (COP) on many levels: as a philosophy, as part of an agency's culture, and as a practical approach to policing within a community. The video explores the essential components and the goals of community policing programs, and includes several specific examples of problem-oriented policing within the COP model. Several successful COP programs are highlighted, providing a snapshot of what policing within a community looks like in practice. Firsthand discussion with a panel of subject matter experts rounds out the program.

The DVD program offers two viewing options:

1. Play Telecourse in its entirety (106 min.)
2. Select among ten Telecourse segments:
  - Introduction (5 min.)
  - Apartment Complex Crime (18 min.)
  - Dealing with Homelessness (13 min.)

Miranda: Advise First, Ask Questions Later

with Daniel Mc너ney, Superior Court Judge, State of California

If a suspect is given Miranda but is not questioned, the suspect's efforts to initiate a conversation about the crime will constitute an implied waiver.

Cases cited: Rhode Island v. Innis (1980) 446 U.S. 291; Oregon v. Bradshaw (1983) 462 U.S. 1039; Williams v. Stewart (2006) DAR 2681; Brewer V. Williams (1977) 430 U.S. 387. (9:30)

Parole Searches Don't Require Reasonable Suspicion

with Jeff Rubin, Alameda County District Attorney's Office

Police may conduct a search or seizure of a parolee without reasonable suspicion so long as the search is not done for an arbitrary, capricious or harassing purpose and the officer is aware of the parole search clause before conducting the search or seizure. Case/statute cited: Samson v. California (2006) 2006 WL 1666974; Pen. Code § 3056. (3:50)

Visual Cavity Searches

with William Bedsworth, Justice of the Court of Appeal, State of California

In this case, the city of Ventura's jail policy regarding visual body cavity searches was held unconstitutional. While the case primarily speaks to jailers, Justice Bedsworth extracts from it some considerations that are important with regard to all searches. Case cited: Way v. County of Ventura (2006 DJDAR 4722 4/21/06). (8:28)

Medical Marijuana Search Warrants

with Jeff Rubin, Alameda County District Attorney's Office

A warrant based on information that a suspect is openly growing a few marijuana plants is devoid of probable cause where the suspect alerts law enforcement that the cultivation is being done pursuant to a recommendation from a doctor (whose name and number are provided) but the police fail to verify the recommendation and there is no other evidence suggesting more marijuana is being grown. Case/statute cited: People v. Russell (2006) 138 Cal.App.4th 723; Health & Saf. Code, § 11362.5. (8:55)

Vehicle Stops: Pretext Stop Made By a Different Officer

with Daniel Mc너ney, Superior Court Judge, State of California

An officer may initiate a traffic stop based on observations of a moving violation made by another officer. Cases cited: Whren v. U.S. (1996) U.S. 806; U.S. v. Guerena (2006) DAR 4903. (7:03)

Duty of Medical Care to Injured Suspects

with Jeff Rubin, Alameda County District Attorney's Office

Police have a constitutional duty to seek medical attention for suspects injured during an arrest. However, this duty is met when police either promptly summon the necessary medical help or take the injured person to a hospital. If this is done, an officer has acted reasonably under the Fourth Amendment even if the officer does not perform a medical procedure (such as giving CPR) that may have been the most effective treatment. Cases cited: Tatum v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2006) 441 F.3d 1090. (11:44)
